Margaret Bell, Traci Lagasse and Jennifer Branch are the three female founding members of the law firm, Andrews . Lagasse . Branch & Bell LLP. They are respected for inspiring women to realize they can have it all – very successful and rewarding professional careers, as well as loving, happy families.

Bell, Lagasse and Branch resigned their partnerships at a large national law firm to strike out on their own and launch a new firm with Jonathan Andrews. As the firm approaches its third anniversary, their business thrives. As a result of their teamwork, they've grown the firm from five to eleven attorneys, while maintaining their commitment to diversity and the strength of women as lawyers. Thanks to their hard work, the firm's client base continues to expand, and they now proudly represent some of the most prominent businesses and public institutions in Southern California.

Bell, Lagasse and Branch enjoy serving as mentors, never hesitating to spend time training young attorneys or offering advice on how to achieve work-life balance. In addition to practicing law full time, all three women also shoulder the responsibilities of motherhood and remain active in their children's education and extracurricular activities. They also give back to the community as volunteers for various local organizations.
